CASE STUDY 1

The problem faced by an Australian company

Apple updated its policy that all applications being published on its App store should be in 64-bit platform. An Australian company approached Optimal Virtual Employee with this concern, as its app was created in 32-bit platform.

The solution offered by our virtual employees

Our developers used Untiy3D to launch the app once again on both iOS and Android platforms simultaneously. Then they started the development and launched such a big application in a very short period of time.

The problem faced by a software company

A software company was using an ERP system, which had table sizes go upto more than 10 GB each. The tables could crash, resulting in crash of the system. It was not recommended to have all the data in a single table.

The solution offered by our virtual employees

Our developers created yearly tables and moved the data on yearly basis. Then they stored the data of the current year and last year in the master tables. This solved the problem.
